Being half tractor and half truck, the Truck-Tor is tailor-made for highway use (it travels up to 50 mph) and has reversible pto for use around farm as a second tractor.

Build Yourself A "Truck-Tor"

If you're looking for an "inflation-fighting" project to tackle in your farm shop this winter, here's a tip from Iowa farmer Steve Boendor: Build yourself a Truck-Tor!

The front half is a pickup truck and the back half a tractor. It's equipped with a pto and serves as a second tractor for performing dozens of jobs around Steve's Oskaloosa, Iowa, farm. When he wants to go to town, he jumps in his Truck-Tor and zips down the highway at 50 mph.

"I got stopped a lot at first by highway patrolmen," Steve told FARM SHOW. They questioned the vehicle's legality on the highway since Steve hadn't licensed or insured it as a truck. "I discussed it with the motor vehicle enforcement office in Des Moines and, after much discussion, they decided it was a
