Silver Stream hoop buildings are used for livestock, equipment storage, temporary grain storage, and many other uses. A full line of end kits and doors are available.

Silver Stream makes hoop barns with either steel or wood hoops. The advantage of wood is that it's easier to insulate and it can be tinned over at any time, if desired.

Wood Hoop Buildings

The relationship between FARM SHOW and Silver Stream Shelters goes back many years. In addition to being featured in Best of FARM SHOW year after year, FARM SHOW has also given away a number of Silver Stream buildings as prizes in our subscription sweepstakes contests. Silver Stream Shelters, owned by Darryl Enns and David Arnold, was founded in 1997. The company specializes in the production of Hoop Barns with either steel or wood rafters as well as doors and replacement tarps.

“Our wood rafter line at Silver Stream Shelters has continued to be very strong. Currently we build 30, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44-ft. widths to any length. Wood shelters make it easier to put ends in the structure, and our custom 4-ft. on center can be tinned over at any time. Insulating and hanging lights are also much easier with our wood laminates,” says Enns.
