

PATTERNED AFTER HOLSTEIN DAIRY COWS

"Cow Clothing"

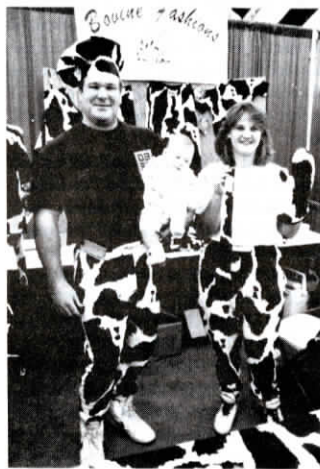

A new line of black and white "cow clothing" is patterned after the markings of Holstein dairy cows.

The first-of-its-kind clothing, made by Flyte Co., San Francisco, Calif., comes in three different lines. "Action wear" clothing includes weight lifter pants, T-shirts, bike shorts, leotards, leggings, pony tail holders for girls, and ties. The "barbecue line" includes chef's hats, cooking aprons, oven mitts, and potholders. The "home-ware" line includes tablecloths, napkins, and placemats. Children's "cow clothing" is also available.

"We think the unique coloring and pattern of Holstein cows give this clothing a striking appearance," says Lareau. "Our 'cow clothing' is sanctioned by the California Milk Advisory Board."

Adult "cow clothing" ranges in price from $12.50 to $28 and children's clothing from $19 to 25.

Contact: FARM SHOW Followup, Bovine Fashions, 1597 E. Everglade, Fresno, Calif. 93720 (ph 209 299-2005).

Mark and Kim Lareau, along with baby Garrett, show off part of their new line of "cow clothing".

New Dog Food Bowl Repels Ants

"It will easily pay for itself in a few weeks by eliminating the need to throw away bowls of ant-infested food," says Charles Cobos, manufacturer of a new plastic dog food bowl that's impregnated with an insect repellent that chases away ants, roaches and other crawling insects.

The bowl, which meets EPA and FDA safety standards, sells for $7.98 for a 9-in. dia. bowl and $6.98 for a 6-in. bowl, plus $2.00 shipping.

Contact: FARM SHOW Followup, Charles R. Cobos, Ants-Away, P.O. Box

Plastic bowl is impregnated with an insect repellent.

1501, Bryan, Tex. 77806 (ph 409 778-3238).

Dog Collar Stops Nuisance Barking

New "Behave" dog collar uses high-pitched sound to stop dogs from barking rather than electric shock that's been used by other preventive collars in the past.

Frank J. Bianco, president of the Elexis Corp., says every year more than 200,000 dog owners have the vocal cords cut on their pets to stop their barking. Others have tried electric dog collars but they can cause pain to the animals and were expensive, at a cost of as much as $300.

A patented new transceiver on the new Elexis collar activates the collar to produce a short, harmless burst of sound whenever a dog barks. The sound doesn't hurt the dog but distracts it so it stops barking. Anyone listening will only hear a "click".

A transceiver activates the collar to produce a burst of sound whenever dog barks.

Sells for $79.95.

Contact: FARM SHOW Followup, Elexis Corporation, 7000 N.W. 46th Street, Miami, Fla. 33166 (ph 800 327-1033 or 305 592-6069).

Electronic Pet Door

They call this the ultimate pet door. It's activated by electronic collar on your cat or small dog so it only allows entry to your pet.

Developed in England and imported by Reilor, Inc., Horsham, Penn., the door wires into standard household current. Five different radio controlled frequencies are available. Overall size of the door is 8 3/4 by 8 3/4 in. Designed for pets with maximum shoulder width of 6 1/4 in. The company is working on a larger electronic door for bigger dogs.

Reilor also sells a variety of non-powered pet doors for all size pets, including magnetic doors and doors that can be installed in thin walls or glass panels. All doors have locks so they can be sealed shut at night.

The electronic pet door is available

Door is activated by an electronic collar on your cat or small dog.

through mail order catalogs and retail outlets, varying in price from $99 to $175. For where-to-buy information, contact the distributor: FARM SHOW Followup, Reilor, Inc., 417 Caredean Dr., Horsham, Penn. 19044 (ph 800 521-5294).

New Products Especially For Women And The Farm, Ranch Home

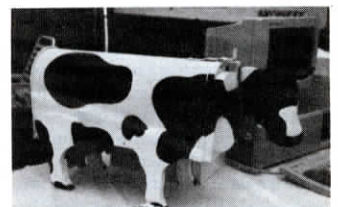

Holstein Cow Mailbox

New Holstein cow mailbox made by Randy Banuelos, Lemoore, Calif., mounts on top of any mailbox post.

The cow has a metal body and wooden legs, head, udder, and tail. A cowbell hangs around its neck.

Sells for $45. Special name-plate $5 extra. If you have a brand it can also be placed on the mailbox.

Contact: FARM SHOW Followup, Randy Banuelos, Box 707, Lemoore, Calif. 93245 (ph 209 867-1424).

Cow has a metal body and wooden legs, head, udder, and tail.

Cap Dryer Puts Hats Back In Shape

You can wash your farm caps without worrying about whether you'll ever be able to wear them again thanks to a new cap dryer and shaper that's designed to get wet caps back into shape again.

After washing you just slide wet cap over the molded plastic form, which was developed by Ron Thomas, McLeansboro, Ill. To get extra stiffness you can spray it with starch.

"It's ideal for organizing cap collections because you can stack the cap dryers on top of each other. By storing caps on the dryer, they'll keep their original shape," says Thomas.

Sells for $9.95.

For more information, contact: FARM SHOW Followup, Tomco, Box 339, McLeansboro, Ill. 62859.

Cap dryer also works great for organizing cap collections.

Step-On Toilet Seat Lifter

If you've got someone at your house who doesn't like it when the toilet seat is left up or who has a back or bending problem, you'll like this new step-on lifter that always puts the seat back down when you're done.

Inventors Mark Numford and Bob Cormier call it the "Bathroom Butler" because you'll never have to touch the seat again. They spent 3 1/2 years developing the patented spring mechanism, which simply attaches to the fixture's hold-down bolt and the seat hinge.

Sells for $24.95.

Contact: FARM SHOW Followup, Consumer Solutions, 1631 The Queensway, Toronto, Ontario M8Z 5Y4 Canada (ph 416 252-2241).

Step-on lifter always puts seat back when you're done.